Like Robinson Crusoe By DADDY

CHAPTER VI

Fresh Milk DEGGY, Billy, Folly Wisher, the Af-PEGGY, Billy, Folly Wisher, the African girl and the chocolate-colored routh sat in the wigwam and watched the storm as it swept over Twinkling Isle. They were glad they were inside, for the tempest raged with a wild fury, the wind blowing in fierce gusts and the rain pouring down in a deluge.

The tiny fairies also were glad to have shelter. They buzzed around the wigwam on their dragon-fly wings smiling and happy. As for the monkeys, they grinned from the other wigwams in a way that showed how pleased they they grinned from the other wigwams in they grinned from the other wigwams in a way that showed how pleased they were that they had followed Billy's lead in building the Indian tents.

But soon Peggy found something between the lead to the soon Peggy found something between the feel was her stomach. It had begun to feel very empty. Then she remembered she had eaten nothing but fruit for a long, long time.

They had expected to find turtle eggs on the beach as Robinson Crusos had done in his adventures, but in the recitement of riding the turtles, fighting the fire and building the wigwams, they had forgotten all about the turtles. had forgotten all about the turtee wish I had a good, big drink of milk."

"Ho, ho, ho!" laughed Folly Wisher.

"Here comes the milkmen."

Peggy and Billy looked out in wonder. Could there be a milkman on this deserted island? No! Not a human and Billy looked out again. There stood a billy goat in the pouring rain.

"Baa! Baa!" said another voice, and a nanny goat trotted out of the woods.
"Baa! Baa!" and a second nanny appeared.

There is the drink of milk you wished for," chuckled Folly Wisher.
"Go out and get it." Then Peggy and Billy remembered how in the story cows to give him milk.
"I don't know how to get milk from goat," said Peggy. "I wish you would milk them for me." She looked straign

Now that wish turned the joke on Folly Wisher. He had to grant all the wishes Peggy made. So the power of the wish made Folly Wisher runger into the storm to milk the goats. He got a gourd and stooped beside one of the nanny goats to milk it. Now these goats were used to being milked, but not by a stranger. They had been milked in the past only by Harrison Crusoe, the castaway missionary. When Folly Wisher stooped beside the nanny goat the billy goat reared on his hind legs.

"Ban!" snorted the billy goat. He put his head down and wham! he butted folly Wisher. Swush! Folly Wisher went plowing face downward into the mud. Up got Folly Wisher. Wham! The billy goat sent him sprawling again. Up jumped Folly Wisher once more, and wham! the billy goat butted again. Up jumped Folly Wisher once more, and wham! the billy goat butted him harder than before, so hard that he rose into the air and came down kersplosh in a big mud puddle.

My, but Folly Wisher looked funny when he dragged himself out of that puddle. He was streaked with mud and his face was painted like that of a his face was painted like that of a clown in the circus. Peggy, Billy and the African savages couldn't help laughing aloud, while the monkeys chattered with glee.

Folly Wisher had to grant Peggy's wish, so he started after the nanny goat again. Wham! the first nanny goat butted him; wham! the first nanny some butted him; wham! the second.

poat butted him; wham! the second many goat butted him; wham! the second many goat butted him, and that last sent him flying into the wigwam.

There Peggy took pity on him.

"We will help you milk the goats," the said. Then she and Billy and Flower of the Forest patted the roots. she said. Then she and Billy and Flower of the Forest patted the goats, and fed them, and finally the nanny goats let Folly Wisher milk them. Then all in the party had a feast of fresh milk, and they felt much better and milk, and they felt much better and ready to go to sleep, which they did while the rain pattered on the roof of But they woke up after a while—in of the night-to meet with another kind of an adventure about you will be told this coming
